TRADING.

Political - Democratic Organization - Republican Speakers-Their Claims-Beath of a Lady-A Marriage. [Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

CHASE CITY, Va., July 17, 1888,
Yesterday was regular County-Court day, and the usual crowd attended. The day was specially noted for trading, selling, and buying horses. Local and outside dealers had an ample supply, and the sheriff, in addition, sold the teams of a livery-stable at auction.

The Democrats held a meeting for the purpose of reorganizing the party and preparing for the campaign. Edward B, Goode.
Eaq., was elected county chairman and empowered to appoint the Executive Committee for the county. CHASE CITY, VA., July 17, 1888.

There was a meeting of the citizens to inaugurate a movement for the representation of the county in the Richmond Exposition. A committee composed of one from each magisterial district of the county was appointed to appear before the Beard of Su-pervisors at their meeting next Monday and ask an appropriation, so as to insure a credit-able exhibit of the resources of the county. Cur forests abound in a variety of valuable timber and agricultural and mineral pro-ducts, and an exhibition of a collection dialecty started on an extensive bridal tour.

Samely asked the superintendent to call on him at the office of the Buffalo Express, but instead Mr. Welch wrote him a letter directed to that office, saying that I he attempted to sard from within the Reservation-fromly good for the season. No sickness prevailing.

northing at 6 o'clock they started to go up to the summit of Mt. Washington. The fourney was begin in a carriage with two good horses, and they were to change teams at the then Hone, at the base of the mountate, twenty miles awar.

Mr. Baker has scaled the wildest bits of mountain heights to the Eastern range, and he had heard much of the heantless of Tuck, ermsu's ravine, which is a deep cut in the point of Mt. Washington. He was wild to go through the ravine by the way which leads to the Summit House. The guide tool him such a jointrey was perillous, no one having attempted it this season, and that the paint spots placed here and there an the rocks as a guide had probably been washed away by the storms. Mr. Baker, however, was determined, and, alighting from the carriage, acreed to meet the party at the Summit House, thinking he would safely cut through the ravine and he at the sunsoit in an hour and a half. Mr. Baker, however, was determined, and, alighting from the carrange, agreed to meet the party at the Summit House, thinking he would safely cut through the ravine and he at the sunsoit in an hour, and half. It was not for several hours, however, when many had given hum up for dead, that he reached the Summit House, having zone through a terrible adventure, cut, bruised, and completely exhausted.

He says that after leaving the carriage the scenery in the ravine was perfect, but wild and rugged. He journeyed on, once or twice saw the paint signs on the rocks, and had no doubt of his ability to make his way over against one of the centre clifts. Far up the ravine he slighted ions and tons of snow. Thinking it would be novel to dabble in snow in July he hurried out of the path, fordea a stream, and doubling several clifts reached the snow and amused himself by throwing snow-balls in the casan below. When tired of this he turned back to find the path, but all his notion of the way was gone. He meaned, after much search, to detect a heige of rock bardly a foot wide that led straight across the face of the cliff and over an abysa hundreds of feet was slippery and uneven, and often he had to crawl and hold on to the bushes grow-ball going, he cried for help again and group along the side. The labor was exhausting, and, as Mr. Balter found is streamly going the side. The labor was exhausting, and, as Mr. Balter found is streamly going the side. The labor was exhausting, and, as Mr. Balter found in the company of the math.

Here Mr. Baker fainted from exhaustion and terror, and regaining his senses a few hours later, discovered, two feet above bin, a Lit of shrubbers growing out of the clift. Springing for this, he barely caught it and swing himself around to a place of safety that, to his delight, led down into a basin of rock. From there he struck Crawford's irail, reached the United States Signal-Service house, and finally attained the Summit House. He fet the shock of his adventure for two or three days.

lage of Malvern, twenty-one miles out on the Pennsylvania railroad, has a population of 400, fully 350 of whom are suffering with dysentery. There have been two deaths so far, and more may be expected, as in many cases entire families are prestrated. The epidemic, or endemic, as some of the physicians call it, broke out in the eastern or cians call it, broke out to the eastern or older portion of the village, and with a few exceptions has confued itself there. The source of the disease is unknown. The physicians are all at sea and are divided in their opinions. The place is a cross between a village and a township, and has no chief magistrate. In Sugartown, three miles south of Malvern, the entire family of Kinzey Weir, numbering eight, including himself, are confined to their beds, suffering intensely.

His wife and child are also suffering much with the same complaint. Dr. Mickerbangh, who is the oldest paysisian in the neighborhood, while he does not directly coincide with the theory as to the decayed vegetable matter, thinks that to it is largely due the present sickness. Maivern is on a high ridge overlooking the Chester Valler, and in every other respect is the healthicat of places. Dr. Mickerbaugh remembers an epidemie during which there were 30 deaths from the disease in a radius of three miles. Three years ago the place was again visited, and there were over 100 people in bed with the complaint. Every year since dysentery, duarthes, and choleramorbus have been the chief work of the physicians, but at no period has it attracted so much attention as at present. It is out of season, as August. September, and part of October is the time when it is most prevalent.

Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.

Nonrolle, July 17, 1388.

The United States steamer Yamic is to be ordered here for repairs, but it is said there will not be a good long job on her, as only $5,000 or $6,000 will be silowed for the work. This is the only crumb of comfort in sight. Commodere Brown has gone to Washington to urge the Secretary to send some work here if it can possibly be had. On Saturday Secretary Whitney promised Judge L. E. Watts, president of the Portsmouth City Council, that work should shortly be sent here outside of the new butile-ship, and the station looked after. The Secretary stated

There are now three hundred houses are in process of erection, and the demand for houses is constantly growing.

The prettiest things, however, about this magic city are three little Jersey calves of the same age from the same mother. They ought to have a place in the great Exposition in Richmond.

The Presbyterians and Methodists have built two very fine churches, and now the Baptists are proposing to build a $15,000 house. Dr. Dickinson, of the Religious Herald, preached on Sunday for Dr. Flippo and urged that the effort be made at ones.
